About the Republic

The Republic of the United Sovereign Nations Confederation (RUTNC) is a sovereign and self-governing entity established by a unified assembly of Original Nations. Founded on principles of self-determination, collective identity, and Nationhood, the Republic represents a groundbreaking model of Indigenous governance in the modern era. It embodies the shared aspirations of its Member Nations to assert their inherent rights, revitalize their cultures, and secure a prosperous and sustainable future for all their peoples.

Far more than a political alliance, the RUTNC is a living testament to centuries of resilience, diplomacy, and a deep reverence for ancestral lands and traditions. It operates through a collaborative framework designed to uphold the unique sovereignty of each Member Nation while fostering unity and collective strength in areas of common interest. This innovative structure enables robust governance, effective resource management, and the protection of shared cultural heritage, ensuring that Indigenous voices are heard and respected on both national and international stages.

Sovereignty

Upholding the inherent right of self-governance for all Member Nations.

Unity

Fostering collective strength through shared vision and mutual respect.

Heritage

Protecting and promoting diverse cultural practices, languages, and histories.

Through its collaborative efforts, the Republic aims to create a thriving ecosystem where Indigenous laws and customs are honoured, economies flourish ethically, and the well-being of future generations is paramount. It serves as a beacon of hope and a practical example of how traditional values can guide contemporary governance to achieve equitable and sustainable development for all.

About the Republic

The Republic of the United Sovereign Nations Confederation is a constitutional republic established by participating Original Nations to work together through constitutional governance while respecting the identity, authority, customs, and self-government of each participating Original Nation. The Republic provides a framework for cooperation in matters including governance, food sovereignty, health and wellbeing, education, cultural heritage, environmental management, trade, economic development, science, infrastructure, justice, and other matters authorised under the Constitution.

The Republic is committed to strengthening the wellbeing, resilience, prosperity, and future of participating Original Nations through peaceful cooperation and responsible constitutional governance. Participation does not diminish the identity or authority of any participating Original Nation.

Constitution

The supreme governing instrument of the Republic. Every constitutional authority, department, representative, member, and person exercising constitutional responsibilities shall act consistently with the Constitution.

Original Law

Foundational legal principles guiding constitutional authority and the conduct of all persons exercising responsibilities within the Republic.

Natural Equity

Constitutional decisions and administrative actions undertaken fairly, reasonably, impartially, and consistently, promoting equality before the Constitution.

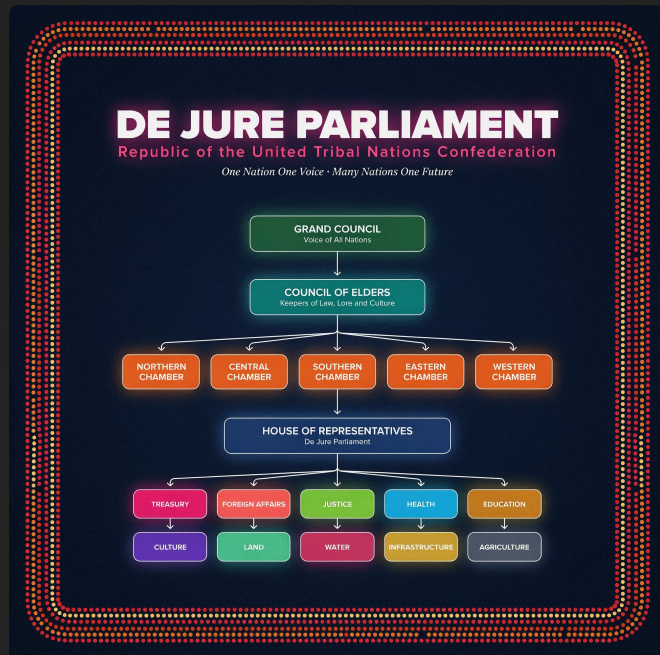

Procedural Fairness

Every constitutional process shall observe fair consideration, impartial decision-making, and proper constitutional procedures.

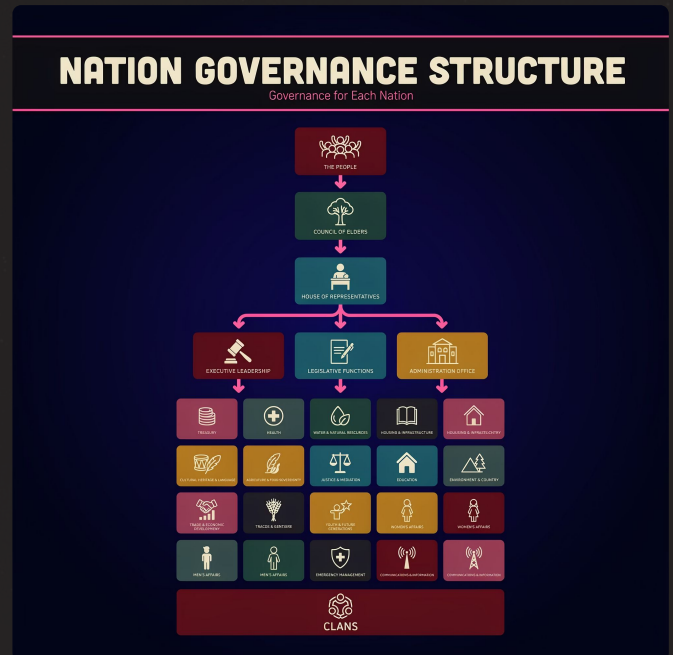

Our Governance Structures

The Republic operates through two interconnected governance frameworks — one for the Republic as a whole, and one for each participating Nation. Together they ensure strong, transparent, and culturally grounded leadership at every level.

De Jure Parliament Structure – The supreme governing body of the Republic

Nation Governance Structure – Internal governance for each participating Nation

De Jure Parliament Structure

The De Jure Parliament is the supreme governing body of the Republic of the United Sovereign Nations Confederation.

One Nation • One Voice • Many Nations • One Future

01	02	03	04
Grand Council – Voice of All Nations One Representative per Member Nation provides overall guidance and unity to the Parliament. One Representative per Member Nation sits in the Grand Council, providing overall guidance and unity to the Parliament.	Council of Elders – Keepers of Law, Lore & Culture Two Elders per Nation upholding Original Law, Cultural Heritage, and Justice & Mediation. Two Elders per Member Nation sit in the Council of Elders, upholding Original Law, Cultural Heritage, and Justice & Mediation.	Regional Representative Chambers Five Regional Chambers (Northern, Central, Southern, Eastern, Western) selecting Representatives from their Regions. Each Regional Chamber selects its Representatives who then take their seats in the House of Representatives – the full Parliament of the Republic.	House of Representatives – De Jure Parliament All Regional Chambers come together to make laws, policies, and resolutions

Parliament Departments Treasury, Foreign Affairs, Justice, Health, Education, Culture, Land & Water, Infrastructure, Agriculture, Trade, Family, Women's, Men's, Veterans, Media, and Emergency	Member Nations – The Foundation Strong Nations = Strong Parliament = Strong Future

Both structures work together – the Nation Governance Structure empowers each Nation internally, while the De Jure Parliament brings all Nations together under one unified constitutional framework.

Vision, Mission & Core Values

Vision

Strengthen participating Original Nations through constitutional governance, cooperation, self-determination, sustainable development, and respect for Original Law. The Republic seeks to build strong, healthy, prosperous, resilient, and self-governing participating Original Nations while protecting Country, waters, cultural heritage, knowledge, and the wellbeing of present and future generations.

Mission

- Strengthen cooperation between participating Original Nations
- Uphold the Constitution and promote Original Law, Natural Equity, and Procedural Fairness
- Support constitutional governance and protect the rights and responsibilities of participating Original Nations
- Encourage sustainable economic development and promote food sovereignty and community wellbeing
- Protect Country, waters, biodiversity, and cultural heritage
- Encourage education, research, innovation, and knowledge sharing
- Build a resilient Republic for present and future generations

Respect & Integrity

Honesty, accountability, and transparency in all constitutional conduct.

Community Wellbeing

Sustainability, cultural continuity, and long-term prosperity for all.

Equality Before the Constitution

Peaceful cooperation and constitutional responsibility for every Member.

Constitutional Framework & Governance

The Republic is established and governed by Direct Democracy of the People and its Constitution, together with all Regulations, Instruments, and other laws made under constitutional authority. The Constitution is the supreme governing instrument. Every constitutional authority, department, representative, Member, and person exercising constitutional responsibilities shall act consistently with the Constitution. The constitutional framework promotes constitutional governance, Original Law, Natural Equity, Procedural Fairness, accountability, transparency, peaceful cooperation, and respect for participating Original Nations.

Parliament

The principal legislative authority. Enacts Constitutions and Acts, makes Regulations, approves national strategies and budgets, establishes departments and constitutional authorities, considers reports and recommendations, provides constitutional oversight, and represents the interests of participating Original Nations. Parliament exercises its responsibilities in accordance with the Constitution.

Council of Elders

Provides guidance on Original Law, culture, tradition, and constitutional interpretation. May provide constitutional advice, consider matters affecting participating Original Nations, promote cultural continuity, encourage peaceful resolution of disputes, support constitutional governance, and preserve knowledge for future generations. Performs its responsibilities independently and in accordance with the Constitution.

National Registry

The official constitutional record-keeping authority. Maintains Constitutional Registers, Official Records, National Registers, Official Certificates, Parliamentary Records, Approved Forms, Constitutional Instruments, Official Seals, and Archives. Preserves the permanent constitutional records of the Republic.

Constitutional Authorities

Established under the Constitution or by Act of Parliament to carry out specific constitutional responsibilities. Operate within powers granted by the Constitution with Original Law, Natural Equity, Procedural Fairness, accountability, and transparency. Every Constitutional Authority shall act consistently with the Constitution and remain accountable to Parliament.

Reverence for Country: Lawful Owners and Cultural Heritage

For Original Nations, 'Country' is far more than mere physical land; it is a profound and living entity, encompassing the lands, waters, skies, ancestral spirits, and all interconnected living things. This deep spiritual and cultural connection defines identity, shapes traditions, and guides the very essence of existence. It is a sacred bond, passed down through generations, that mandates a reciprocal relationship of care and respect.

The Republic stands firmly in its commitment to uphold the ancient and enduring responsibility of Land Owners from their Nations. This involves sustainable management of Country, guided by the principles of Original Common Law and time-honoured wisdom. By protecting these vital ecosystems and ensuring their health and vitality, the Republic directly contributes to the wellbeing and prosperity of present and future generations, aligning with its vision for sustainable development.

Ownership of Land is intrinsically linked to the preservation of cultural heritage, traditional knowledge, and practices. The Republic actively supports and empowers participating Original Nations in their efforts to maintain cultural continuity, foster respectful engagement with the natural landscape, and transmit invaluable wisdom. This deep reverence for Country reinforces the identity, self-governance, independence, and resilience of all Original Nations within the Republic.

Departments of the Republic

The Departments of the Republic administer functions, programs, services, and responsibilities authorised under the Constitution and Acts of Parliament. Each Department administers legislation within the people's constitutional responsibilities, delivers services and programs, prepares reports for Parliament, maintains accurate official records, promotes cooperation with participating Original Nations, supports the implementation of the Constitution, and operates with accountability, transparency, and integrity. The establishment or amendment of a Department shall occur only in accordance with the Constitution and Acts of Parliament.

Members & Participation

The Republic welcomes participation by the Original Nations, Members, also recognised Residents, community organisations, educational institutions, businesses, researchers, volunteers, and other persons who support the purposes and objectives of the Republic. Participation shall always be consistent with the Constitution, Acts of Parliament, and the constitutional authority of participating Original Nations. Participation does not automatically confer Member status, Resident status, voting rights, or constitutional authority unless provided for under the Constitution or an Act of Parliament.

Rights of Members

- Participation in Republic activities and approved programs and services
- Access to public information and constitutional documents
- Participation in consultations and voting where authorised
- Standing for elected positions where eligible
- Making submissions to Parliament
- Fair treatment in accordance with Natural Equity and Procedural Fairness

Every Member shall exercise these rights responsibly and consistently with the Constitution.

Responsibilities of Members

- Respect the Constitution and participating Original Nations
- Act honestly and with integrity; promote peaceful cooperation
- Protect the reputation of the Republic and support constitutional governance
- Respect Official Records and comply with lawful decisions made under the Constitution
- Encourage community participation
- Protect the interests of present and future generations

The Republic encourages Members, participating Original Nations, and communities to actively participate in the constitutional development and public life of the Republic. Community participation may include public meetings, community projects, education and training, food sovereignty initiatives, environmental programs, cultural activities, volunteer programs, public consultation, research, and community events. Active participation strengthens resilient, informed, and prosperous participating Original Nations.

Meetings

The Republic conducts meetings to support constitutional governance, cooperation, transparency, and informed decision-making. Meetings may include Parliament meetings, Council of Elders meetings, department meetings, committee meetings, regional meetings, community meetings, special meetings, constitutional forums, public information sessions, and educational workshops. Meetings shall be convened in accordance with the Constitution, Acts of Parliament, and any applicable Rules of Procedure.

Your Voice, Your Future

The Republic believes that major decisions should be made by the people. Community Voting allows all eligible Members to participate directly in important decisions that affect our shared future.

What We Vote On:

- Constitutional changes and amendments
- Major community initiatives and projects
- Key governance decisions
- Future planning and roadmap approval

How It Works:

- All eligible Members receive clear information about the proposal
- Voting is conducted fairly, securely, and transparently
- Every vote is counted by the National Registry
- Results directly inform Parliament's decisions
- The majority decision guides our path forward

Our Commitment: Every Member's voice matters. Through community voting and open dialogue, we ensure that governance remains in the hands of the people, building a stronger, more democratic Republic together.

Services & Programs

The Republic delivers programs across seven key areas to strengthen participating Original Nations and their communities. Research and innovation shall be conducted in accordance with the Constitution, respect the authority of participating Original Nations, and promote responsible, ethical, and sustainable development.

Culture & Heritage

Protection and promotion of cultures, histories, languages, traditions, and heritage including cultural preservation, language revitalisation, cultural education, genealogy, historical records, cultural events, traditional knowledge, arts and creative expression, heritage protection, and community cultural initiatives.

Environment & Country

Protecting, restoring, and responsibly managing Country, waters, biodiversity, and natural resources including environmental protection, biodiversity conservation, land restoration, water conservation, climate resilience, native species protection, sustainable resource management, environmental education, community conservation projects, and environmental research.

Trade & Economic Development

Sustainable economic growth including trade development, business support, community enterprises, native industry development, investment opportunities, employment initiatives, skills development, economic planning, regional development, and international cooperation.

Research & Innovation

Research, innovation, science, and technology contributing to wellbeing and prosperity including scientific research, community research, agricultural innovation, health research, environmental research, digital innovation, traditional knowledge research, technology development, education partnerships, and innovation programs.

National Registry Services

The National Registry is the official constitutional record-keeping authority of the Republic, maintaining all official Registers, records, certificates, and identity documents in accordance with the Constitution and Acts of Parliament.

Registers & Applications

The National Registry maintains Constitutional Registers, Register of Participating Original Nations, Register of Members, Register of Residents, Department Registers, Official Seals Register, Genealogy Registers, Land and Resource Registers (where authorised), Cultural Heritage Registers (where authorised), and other Registers established by Parliament.

The Registry receives and processes Member applications, Resident applications, register applications, certificate applications, department applications, constitutional petitions, program applications, event registrations, official record requests, and other applications authorised by Parliament.

Certificates & Identity Cards

The National Registry may issue official certificates authorised under the Constitution or an Act of Parliament, including Member Certificates, Resident Certificates, Registration Certificates, Recognition Certificates, Appointment Certificates, Program Certificates, Participation Certificates, and other certificates approved by Parliament.

The Republic may issue official identity cards to authorised Members, Residents, Representatives, and other approved persons. Identity cards may include Member Identity Cards, Resident Identity Cards, Representative Identity Cards, Department Identity Cards, Volunteer Identity Cards, Visitor Identity Cards, Event Identification Cards, and other identification approved by Parliament. The National Registry maintains appropriate records relating to the issue, renewal, replacement, suspension, and cancellation of official identity cards.

Official Records

The National Registry maintains and preserves the official constitutional records of the Republic, including Constitutions, Acts of Parliament, Regulations, Constitutional Instruments, Parliamentary Records, Official Registers, Resolutions, Official Notices, Reports, and Historical Records. All official records shall be preserved securely and maintained in accordance with the Constitution.

Governance Principles & Publications

The Republic makes decisions in accordance with the Constitution, Acts of Parliament, Original Common Law, Natural Equity, and Procedural Fairness. Every constitutional decision shall be made in the best interests of the Republic and participating Original Nations.

Decision-Making

Promotes transparency, accountability, fairness, constitutional consistency, community participation where appropriate, respect for participating Original Nations, responsible governance, and long-term wellbeing.

Accountability

Every Parliament, Constitutional Authority, Department, Representative, Member, committee, and person exercising constitutional responsibilities shall remain accountable under the Constitution. Includes acting within constitutional authority, maintaining accurate records, acting honestly and with integrity, providing information where authorised, responsible management of public responsibilities, respecting constitutional processes, and promoting public confidence.

Transparency

Open decision-making where appropriate, accurate public information, accessible constitutional documents, proper record-keeping, publication of official notices, responsible reporting, and fair administrative processes. Transparency shall always be balanced with privacy, confidentiality, cultural obligations, and the protection of Official Records where required by the Constitution or an Act of Parliament.

Natural Equity

A fundamental constitutional principle requiring that constitutional decisions and administrative actions are undertaken fairly, reasonably, impartially, and consistently. Promotes fair treatment, equality before the Constitution, reasonableness, accountability, transparency, respect, justice, and responsible decision-making.

Procedural Fairness

Every constitutional process shall observe fair consideration of relevant information, the opportunity to be heard where appropriate, impartial decision-making, decisions based upon relevant evidence, consistent application of the Constitution, proper constitutional procedures, timely decision-making, and written reasons where required by law. Procedural Fairness strengthens confidence in the constitutional governance of the Republic.

Publications

The Republic publishes Constitutions (including the Constitution of the Republic, Departmental Constitutions, National Constitutions, Constitutional Amendments, and Constitutional Instruments authorised by Parliament), Acts of Parliament (relating to governance, health and wellbeing, education, food sovereignty, trade and economic development, treasury and finance, environment and Country, culture and heritage, justice, infrastructure, and other constitutional matters), and Regulations (prescribing administrative procedures, operational requirements, standards, approved forms, registers, and official processes). All Constitutions and Acts are maintained by the National Registry as Official Constitutional Records.

The National Registry may publish official forms approved under the Constitution or an Act of Parliament, including Member application forms, Resident application forms, registration forms, certificate application forms, department forms, constitutional petition forms, official request forms, program application forms, event registration forms, and other approved forms. Only official forms issued by the National Registry shall be recognised for constitutional purposes.

The Republic may publish Public Notices to inform Members, Residents, participating Original Nations, organisations, and the public of official constitutional matters, including Parliamentary Notices, Constitutional Notices, Meeting Notices, Election Notices, Referendum Notices, Department Notices, program announcements, community information, public consultations, and other official announcements authorised by Parliament. Public Notices shall be published through approved communication channels of the Republic.

Community Information, Contact & Appendices

The Republic provides official news and announcements to keep Members, Residents, participating Original Nations, and the public informed of constitutional activities and developments. Only information published through authorised communication channels of the Republic shall be recognised as official.

Community Information

The Republic organises and supports events that strengthen cooperation, education, culture, and community participation, including constitutional gatherings, community meetings, conferences, educational workshops, cultural events, training programs, regional forums, public consultations, and national celebrations.

Community programs include community development, youth programs, elder programs, health and wellbeing initiatives, food sovereignty projects, cultural activities, environmental programs, education initiatives, employment and skills programs, and volunteer programs.

The Republic encourages lifelong learning and professional development through constitutional education, leadership development, governance training, cultural education, agricultural training, health education, environmental education, research programs, vocational learning, and skills development.

The Republic encourages Members and Residents to contribute their knowledge, skills, and experience through voluntary participation in community projects, environmental activities, cultural events, education programs, food sovereignty initiatives, youth mentoring, event support, research assistance, community outreach, and other approved volunteer activities. Volunteers make an important contribution to strengthening the Republic, participating Original Nations, and local communities.
